

News

Utility companies support Cass County EDC through challenge fund

Print Page

Published: Wednesday, September 8, 2010 4:15 PM CDT

Cass County utility companies have recently developed a special challenge fund in partnership with the Cass County Economic Development Corporation (EDC).

In this economically-challenging year, the five utility companies were concerned about local economic development organizations and their ability to provide services. Together, they offered to create a matching fund to help the EDC broaden its membership foundation and provide more services in Cass County.

The Cass EDC Challenge Fund is jointly supported by Arvig Communication Systems, Consolidated Telecommunications Co., Crow Wing Power, Lake Country Power and Minnesota Power. They have pledged to match any new membership donations received through December 2010. They will also match any increased memberships from current EDC members.

"We understand there is so much more that could be accomplished to improve the business environment of Cass County by encouraging a strong, diverse and sustainable economy," states Jeffrey R. Sheldon. "A strong grassroots membership foundation will provide new business prospects that will lead to increased job opportunities for county residents."

"This is a unique and creative incentive to grow the local membership base," states Nancy Aronson-Norr of Minnesota Power.

"We are thankful for the support of the utility companies. Their message inspires us to get involved and be part of the solution," said EDC Executive Director Gail Levenson.

The Cass County EDC is a community nonprofit corporation whose mission is "to improve the business environment of Cass County by encouraging a strong, diverse and sustainable economy and to build better relationships between business, government agencies and local communities."

Copyright © 2010 - The Pilot Independent

[\[x\] Close Window](#)